

TODAY IS SO SPECIAL

CPYRGHT

"Here, Mother, this is for you . . ."

What? A 12c bottle of essence of dandelion? A pot holder?
A man's hankie?

It doesn't really matter. Offerings of every description, from sons and daughters of all ages, will be happily received today.

It's Mother's Day, an occasion officially recognized by the United States Congress in 1914, and sentiment is in order.

Two mothers who will be treated to special recognition today are Mrs. George S. McGovern and Mrs. George Horkan.

Mrs. Horkan (above) sits in her living room, sharing the delight of her daughter Anne, 2½, who's being given a "ride" by her father. Kathryn, 7, and Elizabeth, 4, look on and that's 8-week-old George Anthony III in Mrs. Horkan's lap.

Mrs. McGovern (below) accepts with pleasure gifts from her daughters Teresa, 8, and Susie, 11. Ann, 12 (third from left); Representative McGovern, 2-year-old Mary Kay and Steven, 4½, no doubt having something up their sleeves for mother, too.
